The UN SAICM 2020 objectives of sound chemical management create an unprecedented global momentum for chemical reform actions. Identifying this trend and the local need, Taiwan, among many other countries and regions, amended related chemical management regulations to protect human and environmental health.

This conference in Taipei gathers experts from Korea, EU, the Philippines, and Taiwan to discuss practical experiences, the current state of policy implementation, and future plans regarding sound chemical management. The event also means for all stakeholders from government institutions, industry, NGOs and academic to share their views and make a difference in chemical safety.

This conference offers an excellent opportunity to better understand the trend of international chemical management. It provides a platform to facilitate the communication among stakeholders, and to build stronger capacity in formulating future chemical policies.
